CARRYING CAPACITY / RANCH OPERATIONS

The cows typically calve in the spring, starting in mid to late March and the owners keep the cows on pasture during calving season.

After the calves are branded, most of the cattle are trailed to the grazing permit for the summer and fall season. In recent years, North Dakota's oil boom has transformed its economy. Last year, crude oil production rose 35%. As of August 2012, it was the second-largest oil producer in the country. This was due to the use of hydraulic fracturing in the state's Bakken shale formation. The oil and gas boom brought jobs to North Dakota, which had the nation's lowest unemployment rate in 2011 at 3.5%, and economic growth. Between 2010 and 2011, North Dakota's GDP jumped 7.6%, by far the largest increase in the nation. This growth has also increased home values, which rose a nation-leading 29% between 2006 and 2011. North Dakota and Montana are the only two states that have not reported a budget shortfall since fiscal 2009.

RECREATION & WILDLIFE

A variety of wildlife frequents the Whitetail Creek Ranch including elk, whitetail deer, mule deer, antelope, turkeys, grouse, and pheasant. The mule deer are oblivious to the workings of the ranch as they wander and graze through the front yard of the house and around the corrals and barns. Elk use the deep draws and rough Badlands breaks as they travel out into the hayfields and grain fields to graze. The upland birds flourish in the brush and tall grass of the ranch and are found across most of the property. Land owner preference hunting tags are available for large game hunting for in-state owners.

Nearby, the Yellowstone River, Missouri River, and Little Missouri River allow water enthusiasts great opportunities for swimming, rafting, canoeing, and fishing. The historic town of Medora, ND is only 47 miles to the southwest and is home to the Bully Pulpit Golf Course, the Medora Musical, and the Theodore Roosevelt National Park.

The Badlands have drawn outdoor enthusiasts since before Theodore Roosevelt's first visit to the area in 1883. The Maah Daah Hey Trail is an unmatched, 96 mile trail winding through some of the most scenic stretches of the North Dakota Badlands and Theodore Roosevelt National Park. The name, Maah Daah Hey, comes from the Mandan Indians and means "an area that has been or will be around for a long time". Used by bicyclists, horseback riders, and hikers, the trail allows one to experience all the badlands have to offer first hand. Bison, feral horses, elk, deer, and coyotes are just some of the animals that will be encountered on the Maah Daah Hey. Campsites, restrooms, and campfire rings allow for overnight trips on the trail.

The Theodore Roosevelt National Park and the surrounding Badlands are a major attraction for people all over the United States and around the world. Activities in the area include: bicycling, canoeing/kayaking, cross country skiing, fishing, hunting, hiking, and horseback riding. The Bully Pulpit Golf Course, ranked as America's Best New Affordable Golf Course by Golf Digest in January of 2006, is part of North Dakota's "Triple Challenge." The challenge is rounded out by the nearby Hawktree Course in Bismarck and the Links of North Dakota, near Williston. All three are professionally-designed courses that will challenge even the most experienced player.
