Exterior chimneys each gable end, flanked by square attic windows. Original mortar fairly flat, (even on front) ~~side~~ ^{steep} steeple; fairly hard, some cement? repointed in Greek Revival times?, now lots of new cement repointing. Window frames pegged, ovolo trim, nosed sills, 9-11 voussoirs with key the same height. Cornice returned on front; has row of dentils typical of Thomas Metcalf's work (photo 5)--masonry and chimneys also compatible with it.

Federal trim throughout house except in hall, where chair rail was removed and Greek Revival mantel installed (which is marbelized, under flaking top coat of paint, photo 6). Late Federal mantel in parlor. Six panel door with beaded diagonal battens on inside (photo 7). 43. Site Plan (and boundary description and justification for N.R. sites):

Site enclosed by A-B-C-D.
A is where a branch goes under the road, C is on Lee's Creek, D-A is with Parker Road. The property on the other side of road is no longer part of the farm. Boundaries include only a small portion of present farm. House and smoke house foundation contribute, barn non-contributing.

45. Description and House Plan:

Two and a half story, three-bay, hall-parlor, dry-stone house, 24 x 40, with cellar and added rear ell. Upper Ordovician limestone, fossiliferous, tooled and coursed. Exterior chimneys each gable end, flanked by square attic windows. Original mortar fairly flat (even on front), slight steeple; fairly hard, some cement?, repointed in Greek Revival times?, now new cement repointing. Horizontal beaded flush wainscot in upstairs stairwell; peg rail in upstairs hall; shelf mantels upstairs. Attic has tray ceiling, all plastered; batten door; board partition wall.

Fireplace in cellar; exterior entrance from east end of house, behind chimney.

House has two story, two-bay Greek Revival ell added, with stone chimney in gable end. Frame, weatherboarded—has some flush weatherboard. Ell had two-story porch on northwest side, now gone—upstairs door closed off. Ell corresponds with Greek Revival front porch and change in hall mantel, which illustrates the change in fashion. One-story room on rear and enclosed side porch are minor detractions.

House faces south; located on crest of gentle slope to Lee's Creek. Ruins of stone smokehouse in yard southeast of house, illustrating relationship of dependency location to house, may have archaeological value.
